HUNSEY & JORDAN, PROPRIETORS.

JOHN R. HUNSEY, Editor.

EX-COLLECTOR Pinkney Rollins of this State has been appointed to a clerkship in the Treasury department at Washington, at the instance of congressman Martin of the 1st District. It means that Martin and Rollins are Sherman men against the world. The Sherman movement is booming North Carolina.

THE CITY of Altoona, Pa., owes the State over four thousand dollars corporation tax. The State has notified the city authorities that unless the debt is satisfied execution will be enforced, and by this time, perhaps, the city has been sold under the sheriff's hammer. Lockhaven and Sunbury, two other flourishing Pennsylvania towns, is in the same predicament.

ACCORDING to reports which are always reliable, (more or less), a Tilden paper will be started in Washington soon under the able editorial management of Montgomery Blair and Mr. James Harvey. Another interesting item of news is, that Washington is to have a creditable evening paper. It is to be hoped that the enterprising Philadelphians will wake up the sleepy-headed Star. And we may expect, too, better "Press" reports.

A WEEKLY paper called "The National View" has made its appearance. It is published in Washington city and is edited by the secretary of the "National Greenback Labor Party." It is the organ of that party. Without any formal declaration of principles it walks boldly into the child's play of destroying the Democratic and Republican organizations. The future of the new party is thus foreclosed.

Any fusion, coalition, or alliance of the Greenbacks with the Democratic leaders, in Congress or out of Congress, will be a fatal blow to them when the members of the National Greenback party must stand up and be counted. Coalition is political death.

THE NEW ARMY BILL PASSED.

Under Conger's leadership, the Republicans obstructed the passage of the new army bill in the House, Tuesday, by filibustering. Robeson offered an amendment, as a substitute for the bill, reported by the Judiciary Committee, which was voted down. It was then that Conger wanted to offer an amendment, which was cut off by the previous question. He then proposed to fill the bill, and carried his threat into execution by preventing a quorum. A few hours of Conger's leadership disgusted the Republicans. The bill passed its final reading Tuesday, the Greenbacks voting with the Democrats. A similar bill is pending in the Senate. This bill will reach the President this week. Of course he will veto it. Or, perhaps, he may show the country that he is not the slave of party! Perhaps!!

THE CENSUS BILL.

In response to many inquiries from different sections of the State, we note the new features of the census bill passed by the 45th Congress. It will be observed that some very important changes are made in the old law.

The United States Marshals for the States have nothing to do with taking the next census. The President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate will appoint a superintendent of census at a salary of $8,000; and the census office is to be in the Department of the Interior, with necessary clerks, &c., and upon the compilation and publication of the census, the office of Superintendent shall cease, and the period of service of clerk shall end.

The Secretary of the Interior on or before the first day of March, 1880, shall designate the number whether one or more of Supervisors of census, for each State and territory who shall be residents of their respective States or Territories, and said Supervisors are to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the total number of Supervisors for the whole Government shall not exceed one hundred and fifty. If the full number should be appointed, North Carolina would have about three Supervisors of census, whose salary is five hundred dollars, in full compensation for all services rendered and expenses incurred by him, except an allowance for clerk hire may be made, at the discretion of the Superintendent.

These Supervisor's duties are numerous and require strict attention. They nominate enumerators, who are with certain exceptions confined to districts of not more than 4,000 inhabitants to the census of 1870. The enumerators do the work at four dollars per day of 10 hours actual labor and the Supervisors oversee it, receive and transmit to headquarters all the returns. The entire work is to be accomplished in 30 days and from June 1st, to July 1st, 1880.

The new plan is an improvement over the old as the census of 1870 was badly taken and the party domination and success was the chiefest of the republican officials who did the work. We hope that a good situation of affairs will be made and that the South as well as all sections of the country will be faithfully reported. We will in a short time publish the entire text of the bill.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

From the rant and sneers of Conkling, Blaine and Edmunds, in the Senate, and Garfield and Fry, in the House, because the Democrats held a caucus for consultation and preparation before entering on the work of repealing the laws permitting the use of the army at the elections, it was not to be expected that the Republicans, who deemed themselves completely united, would be so soon under the necessity of resorting to the caucus to rally their fast dividing forces, and to whip in as they had previously done Hayes, such members as felt it to be their duty to approve of the policy of non-interference by the army in elections. But such was the case. On last Monday the Republicans, conscious of a division in their forces, and of discontented mutterings and threats to support the Democratic bill to allow the people to hold free elections uninhibited by the interference of the military, called a caucus, and after much running around and hunting up the disaffected, held their meeting. Speeches were made by the stalwarts, Conkling, Edmunds, Robeson and Frye, taking the lead, denouncing the new bill as worse than the repeal of the 6th section in the bill vetoed, and exhorting the Republican brethren to stand solidly together once more for the sake of the party. Conkling said that if they gave way on this bill, it would be the utter route and ruin of the Republican party. Fears were entertained that if the party was divided, that the rigidity recently given to Hayes' backbone, might be softened, and if the Democrats succeeded in restoring the freedom of the ballot, the death knell of the Republican organization was already sounded. By such appeals, and from men of such high position in their party, they succeeded in obtaining a large majority of those present, to aid in opposing all obstacles possible to the passage of the bill. But the meeting was not in complete harmony. Several members were absent who are inclined to support the bill, and such true and faithful Republicans as Mr. Robeson, of Massachusetts, and Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, stated that the bill was right, and ought to be supported by the party. That the people would sustain it, and the political party that opposed it, would not stand before the people. It took some nerve and much division of sentiment, for these gentlemen to take so bold a stand in opposition to, and in the presence of Conkling, Edmunds, and others of the Stalwarts, and upon a rising vote to sustain a resolution to oppose the bill, several Republicans refused to rise.

As we have before said, this bill is drawn with much skill, and avoids all the objections urged by the President and the Republican speakers against the other bill. Garfield, Conger and others have said on the floor of the House, publicly, that they would support such a bill, and unless they back square down from their declarations made so recently, they will be compelled to support the bill. We do not, however, expect them to support it. A Radical has no trouble upon the question of conscription. He has but one thing in view, and that is what will be the effect of his course upon his obtaining office, and having decided in his own mind that question, he dismisses all qualms of conscience or questions of propriety or consistency, as the ravenous wolf on the plains, in pursuit of his prey, he presses on with unyielding rage and hunger for the loot. There would seem to be nothing remarkable about this. Bismarck has evidently done it.

In Newburyport, Mass., James Meade, a seaman aged forty-five years while intoxicated, attempted to jump aboard a steamer, but fell into the river, and was drowned. The steamer, the "H. H. Stevens," was recently returned from Leadville. He has recently returned from a visit to that wealthy region. Ulysses doubtless intends to furnish up a way station, in time for the grand excursion.

The members of the order, including visiting brethren from other Lodges, will meet at Odd Fellows' Hall this evening at 7 o'clock, and after being formed in procession under charge of Past Grand R. T. Gray, Chief Marshal, will proceed to the purpose of escorting the orator of the evening, ex-Governor Wm. A. Newell, of New Jersey, to Tucker Hall.

On arrival at Tucker Hall, the members will occupy seats reserved for them, Past Grand being seated upon the stage.

Gov. Newell will be introduced to the audience by His Excellency, Governor Jarvis, of Seaton Gales Lodge No. 644. After the exercises, the order will proceed to Odd Fellows' Hall, where Gov. Newell will hold a reception, and members will have an opportunity of forming the acquaintance of the distinguished visitor. The exercises at Tucker Hall will be free to the public and ushered in by an attendance.

It is specially desirable that every member of the Order shall be present at Odd Fellows' Hall promptly at 7 o'clock.

County Commissioners.

All the members were present at the meeting yesterday. The result of the Graded School tax election was proclaimed—574 for, and 34 against. Much assistance was extended to the poor; relief from taxes and bills were charged. Wm. Newell, of New Bern, a member of the Board, resigned; three proprietors were transferred from jail to the workhouse; licenses to retail liquor dealers were issued; admission to jail and house of correction were granted with violation of city ordinances; simply was ordered to be refused hereafter; and after some routine work the board drew the following persons to serve as jurors on the 29th of June, after which they adjourned to meet on the first Monday in June:
